But in "the ascent of Mount Everest" the adjective is used as its subject. In "The English language contains about 100,000 words of native origin and there are around 60,000 indigenous words, but the number of words that are in common use as nouns and adjectives, and as verbs and adverbs, are reckoned to be only about 10,000." "The way we speak is the way we think". In the above quote, 'we' refers to 'we people' and 'the way' refers to the 'way of speaking'. There are two kinds of adjectives, namely, those which qualify the noun directly, e.g., "This is a collection of books." The adjective 'collection' modifies the noun 'books'. "A collection of books is something quite different from a collection of other things". The adjective 'collection' does not modify the noun 'other things'. It modifies the noun 'books' directly. The following two sentences are grammatically and semantically correct. "The house is 82157476af
